OUR GREAT PRESIDENT IS DEAD.

NATION'S MARTYR.

William McKinley the Victim of a Lawless Hatred.

With a Benediction in His Heart He Bows to the Divine Will and Passes to His Eternal Rest.

MILBURN HOUSE (Buffalo, N. Y.)
2:15 a. m., Sept. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The President is dead.
The great soul of William McKinley will be done," are the prophetic words that he feebly uttered Friday evening, in his last moment of consciousness, before the ether had brought him to the surgeon's knife, and tonight, one week later, he has gone to his last and final sleep with that benediction in his heart.

This is the most dreadful day that America has had since that other September day, now twenty years ago, when James A. Garfield gave up the precious life that had been sought by the assassin's bullet.

The kindest of men and the most beloved of Presidents has paid the dearest price to the irrepressible hate and folly and vengeance of a creature calling himself a man.

It is a foul blot on the fair fame of great America; it is a reproach to the land where republican government has sown.

A TERRIBLE DAY.

The tension of the day has been tremendous in Buffalo. The city woke to get the fateful bulletins that at 2:30 o'clock the President's heart had all but ceased to beat, and from then, the hours have each borne merely varied versions of "hope against hope," until now, in the early hours of Saturday morning, when the great black fact is known, the watchers who have seen each formal bulletin and scanned the face of everyone who left the Milburn

BULLETIN TO WHITE HOUSE.

(BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P. M.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The official announcement was received at the White House at 2:15 o'clock and is as follows:
BUFFALO, Sept. 14.—Col. S. B. Montgom-morning.

with vivid distinctness: "The President's case has been a hopeless one since 3 o'clock yesterday morning."

There was a time, through the morning, when hope seemed reasonable.
The pulse and temperature had gone back to near their favorable condition of the day before, but when Secretary Cortelyou, on his regular afternoon visit to the newspaper men across the street, said with words which had been well weighed: "If the President lives until morning, there will be a chance for hope," the immediate analysis of the statement brought the conviction that there really was at that moment no ground for hope.

BATTLE AGAINST DEATH.

In the President's room, the day has been one of battle, a battle against death, and outside, to the world which did not know the details of that fierce fight, there has been just as hard a struggle against the deadening fear of the worst. No one wished to admit the awful fact; no one cared to entertain thoughts of so grievous an end as the climax of the tragedy that occurred a week ago.

But the conclusion was irresistible.
Each person who came from the Milburn house, physician, Cabinet officer, Senator or member of the McKinley family, was careful of one thing: to deliver some message of reassurance and still not exaggerate too greatly the condition of the President. Those who,

The news was not surprising. They stood at the corners of the intersecting streets and waited patiently for the appearance of the President. Many of them carried a bulletin. A number of them had credit the news of the President's arrival.

Mann came up in an automobile five minutes later. "I have nothing to say now," Mann replied to a question. The new detail of soldiers for the day arrived from the city a few minutes later. The sergeant changed and the sentries were changed for the day. Lieut. Charles N. Smith was the new officer in charge.

Secretaries Hitchcock and Belmont and Mr. Milburn came out to see him. After two going to their respective offices, the President and Mrs. Wilson went to the White House.

Their serious faces showed concern felt by them over the condition of the President, but he announced that they still had faith in his recovery. Secretary Hitchcock declared: "The President is slowly getting better and we still think that there is more than an even chance of recovery."

SUDDEN DEPRESSION

The sudden attack of depression which came in the early morning came in the form of a great surprise to the President's friends and physicians. They were prepared to hear that he might be able to get well in the morning, but they were not confident that the change would come so early.

As the telegraph instrument began ringing this morning, the hastily aroused telegraph operators began arriving. An automobile racing at top speed was brought to a halt by the telegraph operator. He rushed to speak, but rushed back to the house. Dr. Mann came almost immediately. He, and he, too, ran down the stairs. He either stopped for a word with the telegraph operator, or he rushed into the house. After a few minutes, he returned. He had left the house to go to the telegraph office.

BUFFALO, Sept. 12.—The Buffalo papers all had extra, with the sad intelligence of the President's relapse, on the streets at daylight. One paper announced that the President was dying. The result was that the whole city was thoroughly aroused and alarmed early, and before 7 o'clock crowds of people flocked in the direction of the Milburn residence to learn if the latest news was not more reassuring. They stood at the ropes far down the intersecting streets and waited for the appearance of the morning bulletin. Many of them were to credit the news of the President's sudden change for the worse, still they had learned by word of mouth from the entries of the President's dangerous and critical condition.

When the sinking spell occurred about 2 o'clock this morning, it was feared Mr. McKinley might expire at any moment, as he did not respond to ordinary stimulants. It was only when recourse was had to the desperate method of injection of saline solution, which saved Mrs. McKinley's life in San Francisco, that the circulation grew stronger, and after an hour he called somewhat. His pulse at one time was almost 160. But the slight rally came, and returning hope "with daylight the President appeared perceptibly stronger, and the physicians announced in their 9 o'clock bulletin that his condition was improved. The pulse had fallen several points from the highest, and they affirmed the existence of hope. Dr. Mann declared not optimistically that it was a sure sign the President was dying.

The first physician to arrive for the morning consultation was Dr. Washin, who drove up in his buggy at 8:15 o'clock. He passed quickly into the Milburn residence. "I have been absent for a couple of hours," said he, "and I do not know the condition of the President."

Two minutes later Abner McKinley walked down to the corner to tell his physician, who had been waiting for him with a carriage for an hour, that he would not go to his hotel for breakfast. He then returned to the Milburn residence.

Dr. Mann came up in an automobile and found the President in a very weak condition. "I have nothing to say now," he said, "except to a question."

of the circle of physicians, and another was Mrs. McWilliams, the friend of Mrs. McKinley.

The physicians, after their consultation, could offer little encouragement. He was very weak, and his heart was so feeble that they feared he might go at any time.

The bulletin issued at 2:30 o'clock a. m., told of the very critical condition of the President.

"It gives rise," they said, "to the gravest apprehensions."

The physicians of the bowels had occurred, but the heart did not respond to stimulants. The little coffee he had gained a little strength. He has improved since early morning, but the improvement is very slight.

Dr. Mann and Dr. Mynter left for their homes. They only reassuring words were that they had not given up hope.

A SLIGHT RALLY.

No word came from the Milburn residence for almost an hour after Secretary Wilson and Hitchcock had left. The bulletin usually issued at 6:30 a. m. was omitted. Dr. Rixey at 7:30 told the representatives of the Associated Press that he was slightly encouraged.

"The President has rallied somewhat," he said, "but then you know," he added, "that the President is usually better in the morning."

Secretary Cortelyou at that hour was lying down. He was taking his first rest in twenty-four hours.

A stream of callers began arriving early. Several of the foreigners connected with the expedition arrived to inquire about the President's condition. All callers were met at the door by Mr. Milburn, who informed them that the President had rallied fairly well. Maj. Symmons of the army, one of the callers, said he had been informed that the President was a very, very sick man.

"But the physicians say he has a bare fighting chance," said he.

Secretary Wilson came out on the porch and stood for ten minutes looking into the darkness. He said he had not a shadow of hope, but everything indicated that day broke clear and bright. At 5:30 o'clock Secretary Wilson came out looking happy and cheerful.

"The President has a fighting chance," said he. The tone of his words sounded like the expression of a forlorn hope.

At 9:30 o'clock the scene about the Milburn residence was one that will live in the memory of those who witnessed it as long as life lasts. Down the streets in every direction people were massed, hundreds deep, while at the corner where the headquarters of the press are located, correspondents of all the leading journals of the world were waiting ready to flash the first news as far as the wires would reach.

While with the densest throng of telegraph instruments were clicking off the sad intelligence. In front of the residence the blue-coated soldiers paced with arms at right shoulder. All were waiting, waiting almost breathlessly, for the news.

DOCTORS IN DOUBT.

The doctors finished their consultation at 9:40 o'clock. They left the house together and stopped for a few minutes on the lawn to convey their verdict to the President's brother, Chaplain Stokes of the navy, in his black vestments, who had come to inquire after the President's health. Lifting his hat as the men on whom the President's life depends passed him, the physicians looked serious as they walked away from the residence. Dr. Mann and Dr. Mynter came away together.

"We are very anxious," said Dr. Mann, "very anxious," he repeated, as he entered the carriage in waiting.

"Have you given up hope?" "It is better than when you saw him in the early hours of the morning," he replied, as he detected the coachman to drive away.

Dr. Mynter had little encouragement to offer. "I am not absolutely without hope," said he. The President was a fighting chance, but I would be more hopeful if the day were passed and he had gained a little strength. He has improved since early morning, but the improvement is very slight.

Dr. Mynter admitted that saline solution and hopes means to keep up the action of the heart were being administered.

as can be learned Mrs. McKinley had not been informed up to 10 o'clock of the condition in which her husband was.

ANXIOUS WATCHERS.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the intimates and relatives of the President, who were telegraphed for early this morning, began to arrive and soon after 10 o'clock there was assembled in the downstairs rooms of the Milburn house Senators Hanna and Fairbanks, ex-Secretary of State Day, Secretary Wilson, Secretary Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Baer, Abner McKinley, Miss Helen McKinley and Mrs. E. Duncan, sisters of the President, and Mrs. Lafayette McWilliams, in addition to John G. Milburn, former Postmaster-General, Russell, John N. Southard of Buffalo and Representative Alexander of the Buffalo district.

If the President successfully weathered the morning, his chances of ultimate recovery would be greatly increased, because his condition, other than his heart weakness, is very encouraging.

Gov. Yates of Illinois and Col. Russell of Harrison, emerging from the mansion at 11:30 o'clock, brought the same news given by earlier callers, its purport being that the President was not only holding his own, but improving slightly.

Gov. Yates held a conference with Mr. Milburn, and was advised that it might be well to postpone until later in the day any programme that had been arranged for Illinois day at the exposition. Mr. Milburn informed the Governor that he would be advised later, and that if the President continued to rest comfortably, as at present, there would seem to be no reason to entirely abandon the day's programme.

Col. Harrison said that he called at the house for the purpose of presenting to Mrs. McKinley the sympathy of the Harrison family.

At 11:50 o'clock Dr. Stockton, the physician called in for the first time last night, left the house with former Congressman Lockwood.

The President is holding his own. This is a case to say, publicly," the doctor said.

It is learned, however, that at 11 o'clock the attending physicians decided to stop the use of the saline injections, as the patient had begun to revive from the extreme depression. It was deemed wise to withhold the saline solution for a possible future sinking spell. The quantity of digitalis was also diminished to ascertain if the President's heart could do without stimulants.

HOLDING HIS OWN.

When Dr. Washin left after the mid-day consultation, he announced that there would be another official bulletin at 2 o'clock. To a representative of the Associated Press, Dr. Washin said:

"I cannot reiterate it too often: the President is holding his own."

"Yes," replied the surgeon.

"What does that mean?" "It simply means," was the answer, "that there are fluctuations. One moment the patient seems to revive, the next he relapses into a state of depression. The physicians have not abandoned hope, have they?" he asked.

"In no manner of means. Again I say that there is certainly a fighting chance. At present the condition of the President is not hopeless, but without the minutes the greatly-to-be-fearful moment might come."

"It is true that the saline injections have been stopped."

"Hardly. Indeed, we gave such an injection not long ago. The patient responded and we are waiting to see if another will be necessary."

Dr. Washin's absence left Dr. Rixey alone with the President, but the former announced that he expected to return within an hour.

Secretaries Wilson and Hitchcock followed Dr. Washin and went away in an automobile to the Buffalo Club. The former said:

"I have certainly not given up hope for the President. He is holding his own."

Toward 1 o'clock the Associated Press was definitely informed that the physicians believed that if the President could be carried through the night there would be hope of his recovery. The administration of nourishment has been practically discontinued, as the rectum is much irritated and does not retain the enemas. Only a small amount of nourishment is consequently retained.

The President was very weak, and the heart trouble not thoroughly understood. It was with the belief that Dr. Johnston and Janeway might be of service in elucidating the exact trouble that they were sent for.

The bulletin issued by Secretary Cortelyou at 1:06 o'clock, dated 12:30 o'clock, was not signed by the physicians. The secretary simply explained that the physicians did not desire to disturb their patient's sleep to take the temperature and pulse. The bulletin officially confirmed the unofficial statements which had come from the Milburn residence that the President was holding his own. Dr. Washin was the first of the physicians to return to the Milburn house for the 2 o'clock consultation.

STILL ASLEEP.

At 1:30 o'clock, the President was still asleep, and the heart action was sufficiently strong to justify the doctors in not awakening him for treatment. Up to that hour no other treatment than saline solution injections and a very light dose of digitalis had been administered. The physicians were practically agreed that the test would come tonight, and they were hopeful that they could bring him through that critical period.

Dr. Washin was joined at the President's bedside at 1:30 o'clock by Dr. Mann and Dr. Stockton. They had not been summoned, but had come for the usual conference.

At 2 o'clock p. m. the physicians assembled were notified by Secretary Cortelyou that Dr. McBurney, who had left the city yesterday, had started back and would arrive here at 7:30 o'clock p. m. Dr. Janeway and Johnston were also expected during the evening.

A few minutes after 2 o'clock Dr. Stockton, who was called in the afternoon, came hurriedly out of the house and jumped into an automobile. He said: "I cannot talk. I am in a hurry."

He was going to Dr. Mann's office, and there he was back very soon. Dr. Stockton returned in fifteen minutes with a traveling bag, evidently see the trees," he murmured. "They are so beautiful."

The doctors believed he fully realized how low he was, although he had not been informed. When Mrs. McKinley was told that it would be better for her not to see him this morning, she assented without protest, but she seemed to realize the full import of the request, though she said nothing.

Secretary Hitchcock was heartbroken by the sudden dashing down the big hopes and held of the President's recovery.

"I refuse to surrender," said he, "with great emotion at 10:30 o'clock, I will not give up hope while life remains. I shall hope on and pray to the end."

Vice-President Roosevelt was heard from shortly after 10 o'clock. He had received the news of the President's condition and sent word from the Tahowas Club, where he was staying, that he would come at once. He would stop at Albany for news and then would determine his future movements.

HOPING AGAINST HOPE.

Congressman Alexander at 10:45 o'clock gave the most encouraging news of the morning. He said:

"It is not true that the physicians are without hope, or that those gathered in the house are despondent. The lower heart action is a natural result of the giving of a cathartic and is expected. It was found that the solid food given yesterday had not passed through the stomach, and the cathartic would have to be given."

Then came the reaction. The physicians gave a saline injection, but in very small quantities, and this forenoon used some digitalis, but also in small quantities. They did not want to use any more artificial means than was absolutely necessary.

The results so far are good, and the President is now sleeping, watched by Drs. Rixey, Parke and Stockton. Everybody about the house is hopeful. The news men know him best. Secretary Cortelyou and Senator Hanna are cheerful, and as confident as the set-back will allow. They both know his strong will, and they think that it will help. Drs. Janeway and Johnston have been summoned to take care of the heart action. In other respects the President is doing well."

Rev. Dr. Corwin Wilson, who was once pastor of the First Methodist Church of Canton, where the President worshipped for many years, was among those who called at the house during the morning. When he left he said: "Yes, there is hope for the President. His brother tells me he is making the supreme fight of his life. I feel most deeply for the President, for at Canton, in bygone days, I was his pastor, and truly know his noble character."

Congressman Alexander of Pennsylvania, left the Milburn House at 11:10 o'clock, in company with C. W. Good-year of Buffalo. The latter said the most encouraging phase of the situation was to be found in the hopeful demeanor of those closest to the President.

Senator Hanna expressed confidence that Abner McKinley's sanguine hopes were warranted. The Ohio Senator was quoted as adding:

"The President most certainly has a fighting chance. I still believe he will pull through."

Secretary Cortelyou has refrained from visiting the President's room, and in fact nobody but the doctors or the nurses have been in the apartment.

Anesley Wilcox, who entertained Vice-President Roosevelt when he was here, came out of the Milburn House at 11:30 o'clock and said:

"So far as I can learn, the physicians and those at the Milburn house are very hopeful. Since the early morning the President has improved slightly and even the slightest improvement is more than the physicians should expect."

SERIOUS CONDITION.

Dr. Mann was asked this morning to make an authorized statement regarding the President's condition, in addition to that contained in the bulletin. This he declined to do, but in response to inquiries he said:

"No, I can say nothing about any crisis in the case. A patient may continue in the condition the President is now in for some time, and then pick up or not, just as the case may develop. He is a very serious condition. It is true, but it is absurd to say he is dying, as stated by some persons this morning. I cannot make any further statement about the case just now."

Gov. Yates of Illinois and Col. Russell of Harrison, emerging from the mansion at 11:30 o'clock, brought the same news given by earlier callers, its purport being that the President was not only holding his own, but improving slightly.

Gov. Yates held a conference with Mr. Milburn, and was advised that it might be well to postpone until later in the day any programme that had been arranged for Illinois day at the exposition. Mr. Milburn informed the Governor that he would be advised later, and that if the President continued to rest comfortably, as at present, there would seem to be no reason to entirely abandon the day's programme.

containing some more appliances or instruments.

At 1:45 p. m. Col. Alexander, with a smile, announced a slight improvement. The President is better."

William S. Bull, superintendent of the Buffalo police, called at the Milburn house at 1:15 p. m. to inquire as to the condition of the President. The superintendent said that it seemed practically certain that Emma Goldman could not be held on any evidence possessed by the police here. Calogosa has made no statement and maintains a demeanor of stolid indifference and nonchalance.

The lowering of the pulse to 123, noted in the bulletin, was considered the most encouraging feature of the afternoon bulletin, but the statement that he was better than at the same hour yesterday necessitated explanation in view of the extremely serious and dangerous condition which it was admitted the President is in.

POISON IN STOMACH.

The explanation was made that the accumulation of undigested food in the stomach had at that time become as rank as ptomaine, and that a bolus of calomel and oil had to be given. It was exceedingly debilitating when the relief came, exhaustion following.

Dr. Mynter was the first physician to leave the afternoon conference, and he seemed more hopeful than earlier in the day. To the newspaper men he said:

"The President is somewhat improved, and the prospect is now more hopeful. He is taking more nourishment, including clam broth. There is no danger that he will starve to death. Six days is not long, and now very little food does him. I feel better about the case."

"The main trouble is the heart, is it not?" "Yes, the heart."

"What would you say about the exact trouble with the heart?" "If anybody should ask you," replied the doctor, "just tell them I would say nothing."

"Is there any organic trouble with the heart?" "None that we could discover."

"There is any idea that the bullet was poisoned?" "Absolutely none."

WHO'LL BE THE NEXT?

The other week, Joseph Cook, the famous Boston divine and lecturer, succumbed to Bright's disease of the kidneys; last week, Pierre Lorillard, the millionaire, died from the same cause; and the following week Charles Nordhoff, noted historian and journalist, also died from Bright's disease. Nearly every daily paper announces the death of some prominent person from this frightful malady, and thousands of others die from it without comment.

Naturally we ask, who'll be the next and how can we save our own safety? To refrain from high living will guarantee immunity, for two of the three victims named were men of the most careful habits. Kidney complaints attack all classes of persons. All we can do is to keep our kidneys, and whenever we have backaches, head-dizziness or irregularities, commence at once to make our kidneys right, before fatal results become inevitable.

The best preparation ever devised for these troubles, composed of specifics used by famous kidney specialists, is known as FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. If taken early it positively cures every form of kidney trouble, and in the most hopeless cases it will give wonderful relief.

It is recommended to you on account of its thorough reliability.

THE ROOSTERS MUST GO.

So says Prof. Pierce.

LOCAL SPORTING RECORD. HODSON WAS VERY EASY.

Locals Had Tallies to Throw Away.

Game Called in Middle of Fifth Inning.

Premature Notice of Death of the President the Cause. Dutchmen Win.

The Looos were awarded the ball game yesterday in the contest with the Cripples by a score of 9 to 0 in the fifth inning. With the score actually at that figure the report came to the ball grounds at 4 o'clock that President McKinley had died. This sad news was announced in the middle of the fifth inning when the locals were at bat, with one man out. It caused universal sorrow and surprise, and there was a general exodus from the grounds. A number of spectators demanded that the game be stopped, and after a short consultation between Umpire Hardy and the players this action was taken, and the game called and given to the Looos, according to the result at that time—9 to 0.

There was no absorbing interest in the game, for the serious condition of the President seemed to have some mysterious influence on the crowd, and while everyone was pleased at the score there was no excitement. There was actually nothing to the game from a baseball standpoint, for the Looos hit the Cripple pitcher with perfect ease and batted in enough runs to win two games. The last time Hodson pitched here he did great work, but yesterday he was at his worst and was pounded all over the lot.

In the first inning Hodson struck out Hemphill, the first Looos up, but Heitz beat a punt and Hutchinson and Householder made singles and Reitz and Hutchinson scored. In the second inning Hodson drew a pass. Kelly reached first on an error on an infield hit. Spies was hit by Hodson and a Looos hit by Hemphill for a single. A few Cripple errors mixed up with these occurrences netted three runs. Almost the same thing happened in the third, Albertson, Bowman and Kelly scoring on several errors and hits by Kelly and Spies.

In the fourth inning, Reitz started off with a hard single along the third base line, was forced at second on Hutchinson's hit to Arellanes. Albertson knocked a clean one to left field, and then Householder laced out a double to the right-field fence. Bowman then fouled to Lohman and Kelly went out on a hit to Mohler and his team.

This was all for in the next inning came the premature announcement of the President's death and the calling of the game.

The score:

LOS ANGELES	A.B.	R.	H.	E.	P.	O.	A.	E.
Hemphill, 1st	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

Summary:

Runs scored for Hodson, 4; two-base hit—Householder; first base on error—Los Angeles, 1; Albertson, 1; left on base—Los Angeles, 4; Oakland, 1; struck out—By Jones, 1; by Hodson, 1; Double plays—Bowman to Kelly to Hutchinson (unassisted); Time of game, 1:15; Umpire—Hardy.

Notwithstanding the death of the President the two teams will play ball today. Hale and Moskman will be the opposing pitchers.

VICTORIOUS DUTCH.
BEAT STATESMEN EASILY.
[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—(Exclusive Dispatch.) A change of luck came to the San Francisco today and they really won a game in the lucky seventh. Whalen was in fine form, and though the Sacramento played an errorless game they were beaten. The one run that the champions got was an unearned one, and Whalen was responsible for it. McLaughlin was safe on Whalen's wild throw to first, went to third on Sheehan's hit to right and scored on Courtney's out.

The San Francisco won the game the next time they went to bat. Fabel led off with a single. Krug died at first, but Shay and Reilly singled. Fabel came home from second on Shay's hit to center. Shay crossed the plate on the throw to second to catch Reilly. Whalen drove the ball to Devereaux, who tried to catch Reilly at third, but failed. Nordyck sent the ball out for a clean hit and Reilly brought in the third run.

The game was an odd one from the fact that there was not a single strike-out by either man.

San Francisco battled Heffer well, but they could not bunt their hits, except in the seventh. Devereaux made a peculiar record for a shortstop, as he got six put-outs without a single assist.

The game was a well-played one, but it was marred by the rowdiness of the crowd. The Sacramento, who was hooted for his offensive and illegal coaching.

SEVEN COPPER CLAIMS OF ROSEMAN BOND.

EASTERN SYNDICATE SECURES CONTROL FOR ONE YEAR.

Great Development Work to Be Done in Lynx Creek Country in Fall and Winter—New Railway to Be Built.

The Roseman group of seven developed copper claims in the Roseman mining district of Northern California has been bonded to an eastern syndicate.

The group is one of the important products of that territory. It adjoins the well-known Black Diamond property, and was exchanged for something like $25,000. The bond becomes operative at once and runs for twelve months.

The Roseman was opened up by R. H. Roseman, who since associated with Mrs. W. Obst, Antonio Joegel and Gus Bauer.

THOUSANDS FOR LYNX CREEK.
Arrangements have been made for the investment of many thousands of dollars in the mineralized region of Lynx Creek, Northern Arizona.

E. B. Gage and other owners of the Poland mine are promoting a scheme for the construction of a great tunnel, but before its completion a railroad will be built from Huron to the Poland mine, a distance of eight miles. The contract for the grading was let not long ago to Grant Brothers of this city, and it is their intention to begin work before October 1.

Huron is on the Huron & Eastern Railroad, a branch of the Santa Fe and Prescott & Phoenix Railroad, and is surrounded by what appears to be a mineralized district. There are many prospects throughout the field, but so far the development work has been on a very small scale.

In the past six months the Poland mine has been worked considerably, but greater things are to be done. Some of the heavy backers of the property are Gage and Frank Murphy, mining and railroad operators.

The railroad from Huron will run to the north of the granite tunnel, now 700 feet long, but which will be 800 feet when completed, near the Poland mine. It will pass through several mining claims for the Mudhole, and will issue at the bottom of Lynx Creek.

RAY MINE CHANGES HANDS.
It is reported that the Zackerdorf interests have gained entire control of the Ray copper mines of Arizona and pay to the Engle Brothers of this city, who expended in railroad construction and improvements at Kelvin. It is the intention of the new owners to resume mining claims for the coming Sunday by Dr. W. W. Latta.

PICKED FROM DUMP.
Wright H. Aubury, an assayer and mining engineer of this city, is now engaged in examining the Capitola mine near Keswick, Northern California, which is owned by a lady resident of Los Angeles. In commenting on his arrival in Redding, the Searchlight of that place says: "He was a member of the surveying party which laid out the town of Hedding in 1872."

Official returns show that the gold produced in the Cripple Creek country during August was $2,555,000, the greatest single month's record.

KITCHENER TELLS STORY OF BRAVERY OF FOUR GORDON HIGHLANDERS, A FAMOUS REGIMENT.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]
LONDON, Sept. 13.—[By Atlantic Cable.] A dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, announces that Lord Kitchener, a son of the former President of the Transvaal, and Capt. Kitchener has sent King Edward, as colonel in chief of the Gordon Highlanders, a story of the bravery of four Gordon Highlanders, a famous regiment, Lord Kitchener says that after the Boer attack on July 4 on Watson Spruit, the Highlanders behaved with the utmost gallantry.

"The last four men, though completely surrounded and without cover, continued to fight for three hours, were killed and the fourth was wounded. On the Boers asking the reason why they had not surrendered, he replied: 'Why, man, we are Gordon Highlanders.'"

To Make Perfect Girls.
A girl's school where the ologies are tabooed and where mathematics is an unknown terror has been for several years a flourishing institution in the beautiful county of Kent, Eng. The aim of this school is to develop girls into physical perfection, and nothing is allowed to interfere in the smallest degree with the attainment of this object. A Chicago matron, whose sixteen-year-old daughter has just begun a two-years' course there, is of the opinion that her child will graduate into a happier woman than many a seminary girl who has burned midnight oil, which, by the way, is an unheard of abomination in the Kent school. The founder and head of the school is a Swedish woman, who has attained a high position as an authority on physical culture and who had broad experience in London as a teacher before she opened her college, which is backed by several well-known English women.

Every applicant submits to a medical examination, and if organic disease is found, is not accepted as a pupil, but if there is nothing more serious than nervous prostration, circulation, etc., the girl is admitted, provided there is a vacancy for her. Her corsets come off at once and are not put on again during the two years. She does not don a hat from the hour she enters the school until the hour she leaves, no matter how bad the weather may be. Her diet is liberal, but strictly hygienic, and any exceptions in it are made only by the physician's orders. She wears a uniform, consisting of a loose blouse of dark blue wool, with knickerbockers and a light-weight knee hit, black hose, and a pair of black shoes. She goes to bed every night at 9 and gets up at 4, and unless it is actually storming she spends almost every moment of the day in the open air. Simple instruction in anatomy is given, and the pupil is taught to swim, row, ride horse and wheel, run, vault, play cricket, tennis and hockey. The applications for admission are always in advance of accommodations, and steps are being taken for large extension of the school. (Chicago Chronicle.)

SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST.
Awarding of Prizes Indefinitely Postponed Out of Respect to the Dying President.

Half a hundred of the most energetic young men and women of Southern California, together with a few hundred of their relatives and friends, gathered at the Los Angeles Business College last night to witness the awarding of the prizes in The Times Scholarship Contest. But respect for the dying President of the United States caused a postponement of the interesting ceremony.

Elaborate arrangements had been made for the distribution of the prizes which have been so deservedly earned, but any form of rejoicing seemed sacrilegious when the nation's Chief Executive lay dying on a bed of pain, and at the request of those most deeply interested in the contest, as well as at the suggestion of The Times' management, it was decided to postpone the function until a later date.

Most of the prize-winners were present last night with their minds made up as to what scholarships they would choose, and representatives of the various schools cooperating with The Times in the disbursement of the premiums, were also on hand to participate in the formal awarding of the prizes, but by common consent the entire ceremony was indefinitely postponed, out of respect to the dying President.

The Times will announce at an early date when and where the awarding of the prize scholarships will take place.

Relics of Marie Antoinette.
A very interesting historical relic has just been unearthed in Paris among the archives of the Department of the Seine. It is the list of objects found in the pockets of the dress that Marie Antoinette wore at her execution, sold at public auction for the benefit of Samson, the executioner. The first lot was a small pocketbook, in green moiré, containing a pair of scissors, a small corkcure, a pair of pinners, a comb and a very small pocket looking-glass, and some other trifles of red morocco. This sold for $112. The second consisted of three little "portraits" in green morocco cases, one of them being surrounded by a metal frame, and sold for 88 cents. The prayerbook which she used contains a great many notes in the Queen's handwriting, and is now in the Musée Carnavalet. (Chicago News.)

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

An appeal from the act of the Street Superintendent in accepting the improvement work on Figueroa street between Second and Fourth streets was filed with the City Clerk yesterday. The appeal is based on a disagreement as to street lines between Mr. Walker of the Council and City Engineer Stafford.

Alexander Crow, member of the State Board of Horticultural Commissioners, is in Southern California on a trip of inspection.

The Southern Pacific has renewed its fight against the Salt Lake at Pomona by beginning an injunction suit.

The Moore estate, comprising stock in the famous Yellow Aster mine, was partially distributed yesterday.

AT THE CITY HALL.

CONTOVERSY OVER SECOND-STREET LINES.

APPEAL FROM THE ACCEPTANCE OF SIDEWALKS.

City Engineer Gave Official Status to Lines That Did Not Agree With Ordinance Passed by Council—Another Fight in Prospect.

Property owners on Figueroa street between Second and Fourth have appealed from the action of the Street Superintendent in accepting the sidewalks and curbs put in along the street by Contractor John Moran. No protest was made in the appeal against the character of the work, but it is asserted that the sidewalks and curbs are not as the proper line at Second street.

This appeal will reopen the controversy that was so hotly between Councilman Walker and City Engineer Stafford over the lines of second street.

Two surveys of the street have been made, and at Figueroa street there is a difference of about four feet in the lines established by the survey. Some engineers have given one survey as the official street line, and some the other, with the result that part of the sidewalks are four feet further north than neighboring ones.

The southern survey was run first and is known as the Compton survey. The other line was established by the late George Bloom King, a young engineer who met a violent death at the hands of the KKK. The latter line City Engineer Stafford has confidence, and all official stakes have been given by him on this survey.

William P. Brown and half a dozen other signers of the appeal assert that the improvement has not been made in accordance with the ordinance of second street as established by Ordinance No. 104 (new series), and does not accord with the proper line of third street. The ordinance cited is one establishing the line of second street and was passed by the City Council April 23, 1901.

There were warm times in the City Council about the time the ordinance was passed. Walker had tried by every means to force the City Engineer to give stakes on the Compton line, but without success. Finally he introduced and the Council passed an ordinance purporting to establish the line of second street as Walker wished.

In August the City Engineer was instructed to prepare an ordinance of inspection for the improvement of the street. Regardless of the former ordinance, the matter will be settled in accordance with the King survey, which the City Engineer believes correct. The line anywhere else. To place the line on the King line would be to place the line on the King line.

Now the appeal is taken and the subject will again come before the Council. As the work has been declared good by the Street Superintendent, and the council act is not to blame for the lines given by the City Engineer, it is not probable that the Council will sustain the appeal. The matter will eventually have to be adjudicated in the courts, it is thought, and the appeal may have been filed merely as the groundwork for bringing suit.

No Water, No Pay.

Albert L. Elliot, general manager for the Los Angeles County Water Department, who runs the "Chutes," has filed with the City Clerk a protest against the action of the city in charging him $25 for water that he did not get. Before Washington Gardens was opened as a pleasure resort the company asked permission of the city to take water for the lake from the aqueduct running down Main street. The permission was granted on the ground that the company pay $25 a month for the water. The supply was short and no water appeared. The company dug its own well and got water from the city to reduce the rate to that charged other customers.

Got the Permit.

A permit was issued yesterday by Secretary Hopkins of the Park Board for a performance by Capt. George Stanger at Washington Park next Sunday. It is said that the pass word of the Los Angeles Highway Company got a hurry-up call Thursday night and that the Park Board acted the next morning at breakfast speed to the City Hall. While no definite information is given that it is not a rare guess to say that the four commissioners and Secretary Hopkins will make a considerable monthly saving in car fare in the future.

Blanchard Back.

Councilman R. L. Blanchard of the Ninth Ward returned to the city yesterday after a week spent in hunting for the pecora. Mr. Blanchard and his party of Nomads saw only the specimen of the cervus fawn, and that was a buck that lost no time in getting out of range. Although the buck led the party a merry chase over Mount Gleason and was finally lost. Mr. Blanchard, who chairman of the Council, has announced that he is to frame an ordinance for the civil-service management of the water plant, said yesterday that no meeting will be held until the committee members are back. When that will be is not known. Messrs. Bowen and Tond are in the city now. Mr. Allen was in San Francisco at last reports and Mr. Pierce in Sacramento. Mr. J. H. Lauder, who is in Sacramento, it is doubtful whether a quorum can be secured for a meeting of the Council next Monday.

I love myself little stale. But to Mr.
Stanton they are always new. He not solicitous to analyze the wherefore of his joy in them. It is sufficient for him that they do rejoice and so he sings of the smiles from day after day. In all the song there is the invigorating breath of the early morning, sweet with the dewy fragrance of many blossoms and fresh with untainted breezes.

THE TIMES' DAILY STORY.

WIDOW BURBRIDGE'S JEALOUSY.

LANGDON WHITE.

[Published under special arrangement with A. & M. McClure Co., New York.]

T HE Widow Burbridge, who lived in the outskirts of New York at Glendale, had been "keeping company" with Thomas Parker, widower and village contractor, for three years, and yet she could not say she loved him. He had pressed her for an answer on several occasions, but she had replied that she wanted to be sure of her own feelings first. Her lamented husband had been such a good man that it was almost impossible for her finding another. She had loved him before marriage for saving her from a water grave in the horse pond, and after marriage because he always chopped off the minutes of her life as the horseshoer did and made the penny bar of soft soap. Widower Parker assured her that he would take all these things and watch over the village barrel to boot, but she sighed, shook her head and begged for a few weeks to think it over.

When the contractor sat down with a piece of chalk one day and figured it up that he had been courting for three years and the wife was still not in sight yet, he began to plan: As he planned he smiled, and three days later the Widow Burbridge heard some news.

He had missed one of his regular sparkling nights, and she had been wandering about like a witch until Mrs. Morgan dropped in to give her the latest. It was to the effect that Parker was "making up" to the widow and that all other widows living on a farm two miles away. Gossip was already saying that he had jilted Miss Eberhart, and now he would speedily lead the other to the altar. Widow Burbridge did not let on that a mist arose before her eyes, and that her heart thumped as if it were like a hammer as the tale was unfolded. She even kept from turning pale or reacting in any manner, although, but when the old gossip had departed at last a voice was heard saying:

"Thomas Parker jilts me for another woman! Never on this earth! I will do the jilting. I will write him at once that all our betwixt is broken."

But she didn't. When she got all ready she discovered that there was no link in the honest connection she made two other discoveries: That she loved the widower and that jealousy had crept into her heart for the first time in her life since her husband died and ready to say "yes," and her eyes flashed at the thought of the contractor being taken by another woman. She finally concluded to wait for him to appear, and then to encourage him to pop the question for the ninth or tenth time. One evening at eight o'clock in the evening and he had not appeared she became excited. It must be something about the other woman. He had gone to "spark" her. Then, just like a woman, she reasoned it out: If he takes her why does she want to marry him to keep him from marrying the other woman?

At 10 o'clock the demon of jealousy having gored at her heart for an hour, she put on her bonnet and started out. She didn't exactly know where she was going, but she knew she was lost. She carried her through the village and along the country highway. She wanted to see if the widower was really visiting the other widow. The place where she would be seated in the parlor and the curtains would be up, as in all farmhouse houses. At last she came to the hen the jealous woman suddenly stumbled over a hog sleeping in the road, and was given an acrobatic fling. Some women people sit on their heels without their hat crushed as flat as a pancake and their dresses covered with dust, but this one did not. She sprang up with teeth shut together, and five minutes later a cow ran her into the wayside ditch. She tried to pull herself out, but she climbed out, but she concocted herself that it was night, and no one could see her.

Her third adventure was with a belated wheelman. He came whizzing along the road at express speed, having no light, and figuring that theonest folk were abed. The bike struck the woman all over, and when she returned to consciousness she found herself climbing back onto her feet. She was wondering what she wanted there when she fell into one of the pits of a creek. And she was washed full of mud and water she was not hurt, but it took her the best part of ten minutes to get her hair dry. She climbed the fence back into the highway with the intent of prasing on, but there was one more surprise in store for her. She stepped forward, but was turned out to die and was making a game fight of it, was lying by the roadside all night long, and was alighted for human society, and he scrambled up and uttered a bray that made the widow jump two feet and brought her screaming back to her senses knowing what it was, but believing that her last hour had come, she turned to flee. At length she saw that she was in the arms of Thomas Parker, who cried out:

"Villain, one step further, and you are a you man! Mary, you are saved. I called at your house, but as you were not at home I came in search of you. Black wretch! Your victim has escaped you!"

"Oh, Thomas," sobbed the bedraggled widow, "but I love you!"

"Are you sure of it?"

"Yes, I know it is love at last, and I'll marry you next week."

"And how came you to walk so far?" he asked, as they plodded along with her water-filled shoes splashing joyfully.

"—I lost my way, and if you hadn't come up just as you did—"

"Don't mention it! I have stood ready to save your life at any time in these last three years. Now, then, we are to be married in two weeks."

"Yes."

And they were. The honeymoon was still on when old Mrs. Hopkins called on the bride to share a glass of champagne.

"I declare, but I think something's gone wrong in my head. I don't seem to get things right, somehow. You know I was telling you about that other widow?"

"Yes."

"And that Mr. Pa ker was making up to her, and was going to throw you over?"

"Yes, but he didn't."

"No," he didn't, and 'cause why? I got things mixed, you see. It was Aba Whiteford who was making up to her, and you never told me she went off into a mud puddle that night at all. I s'pose, however, that it didn't do no particular harm."

"No, I s'pose not," replied the bride as she remembered the "horning" of her lover.

BILL'S DEBUT.

How the Stage Cat at the Orpheum Fell at Last Before the Charming of Woman.

Bill, the gentlemanly stage cat at the Orpheum, has fallen at last before the charms of sweet femininity.

His vaudeville partner, Davis, with indifference, left Truly Shattuck in order to eat a rat of untempting toughness, and didn't even know that Dorothy Studebaker was on the bill.

After a long and faithful career as rat catcher, it was only this week that he discovered what it is that other fellows are in women for.

It was a little bit of a girl named Jennie Metzler, who is doing a turn at the house this week. Bill loved her on sight. He lost all interest in rat hunting, and became utterly useless except to trail around after this little miss. He never let her out of his sight from the moment she gets to the theater, even going to her dressing-room, like the most reckless of "Johnnies."

The other night in the midst of a song song medley, she suddenly realized that she "lost the audience." They weren't looking at her at all, and her song was wafting on the desert air.

Bill was making his debut.

He came to the edge of the tormenting and blinked out at the footlights, and did not see so much in a stage career after all. He yawned broadly, and looked himself with care, indifferent to the fact that it is supposed to be the height of bad theatrical manners to come "on" without your make-up properly fixed.

His being complete, Bill stretched himself by putting out his forelegs as far as they would go, and sagging down in the middle until his belly was on the floor. Then he wandered leisurely out to see what the little girl was making so much fuss about.

He sociably assisted her in the sing-song of "Roses" and "The Honeyuckle and the Elm" by rubbing up against her legs. When she got to the next song Bill passed it up with a bored air, and trotted sedately off the stage.

Miss Metzler was very self-possessed for such a little girl, and laughed at Bill with the rest.

CEAR MAY NOT VISIT FRANCE.

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—Although the Dantic festivities are not yet over and the cannon not yet silent, public interest centers largely into the visit of Emperor Nicholas to France, and there is much speculation as to whether he will go to Paris, judging from dispatches received from the French capital, it looks as if official circles in France had given up that hope and were now devoting themselves principally to securing the safety of the imperial guests.

NEWS AND BUSINESS.

Teachers' Meeting.
A general teachers' meeting will be held in the High School auditorium this morning at 10 o'clock to make preliminary arrangements for the opening of the schools Monday.

Burned by a Car.
A man giving the name of Christol Gueterres was treated at the Resolving Hospital yesterday afternoon for injuries sustained by being knocked down by a street car at the corner of Fifth and Main streets. His shoulder was severely bruised, and his left arm injured.

Burned by a Lamp.
Fire at the home of Fred Walter No. 744 Ceres avenue last evening caused small damage and resulted in a painful injury to the mother of Walter. A lamp exploded and Mrs. Walter attempted to smother the flames with a blanket. Her hands were burned.

Postponed.
Owing to the general anxiety prevailing it was thought best yesterday to postpone the public distribution of scholarships to be taken place last evening at the Los Angeles Business College. No date has yet been fixed for the event, but due notice will be given.

Board of Education.
When the Board of Education met yesterday afternoon to consider the complaints lodged against Mrs. Mary L. Ramsdell, principal of the University school, and to hear the lady herself, the main room and the auditorium were filled with ladies from that neighborhood who had come to uphold the teacher's reputation. At 4 o'clock the five members of the board present adjourned the special meeting without action. It is understood that the matter is dismissed.

False Pretenses Charged.
R. C. Glasser is a prisoner at the City Jail, charged with obtaining property by false pretenses. He was arrested last evening on a warrant sworn to by George Simpson, proprietor of a saloon at First street and Broadway. Simpson alleges that Glasser secured $15 from him on a check, when he had no funds in bank, and a day or two after Simpson cashed the paper was returned to him, marked "no funds." A friend of Glasser settled the claim for $15, but as the court costs remained Glasser was taken in.

BREVITIES.

DR. DR. WOODWORTH
MAKE CONFESSION!
REPORT THAT HE HAS TOLD THE BIG ROBBERY STORY.

Said to Have Been Conspiracy Between Him and Mrs. Wonders to Get Possession of Kempley's Iowa Farm and Realize on It.

It is reported that Dr. Orrin L. Woodworth, under arrest for robbing John Kempley of Long Beach of $25,000, has confessed to a government Secret Service agent that there was a conspiracy between him and Mrs. Wonders, Kempley's daughter, to get possession of the farm in Iowa.

The accused man is said to have been in the "sweet box" for a season yesterday, concerning the dies for the manufacture of counterfeit silver dollars, which are now in the hands of the government agent, having been secured from Woodworth's trunk.

Woodworth was then coudoned on the subject of the Kempley farm, and he is said to have broken down and told the story. According to this report, his and Mrs. Wonders' scheme, in brief, was to secure possession of the farm in the name of Woodworth, mortgage it for as large a sum as possible, and divide the plunder.

If this is correct the natural solution of the talked-of $25,000 is that the money supposed to have passed from Woodworth to the two women in payment for the farm, was nothing more than bundles of paper, and that Woodworth must have gotten rid of it either at Santa Paula, where he first stopped, or on the way there.

In this connection it is recalled that when he was about to get on the train to go to Santa Paula he overlooked the mysterious package, and would have gone off and left it on a seat in the railroad station had his attention not been called to it by the man who drove him to the train.

"Old Man" Ketchum.
Old man Ketchum, the father of George M. Ketchum, who owns this record-breaking trotter Crescuto, said a Westerner at Brighton Beach after the great race Thursday afternoon, "was one of the most prominent characters in Toledo years ago just as he was about the richest man in that town. He was as 'clever' as he was rich, and many a story is told about his methods which made him a rich man."

"Some time before he died he had amassed about as much wealth as he did in that vicinity, and had nothing to do but see that it didn't get away from him and to enjoy himself in his own peculiar way. The things he used to do amused Toledo. It was in the days of bob-tail horse cars, without conductors, when a passenger used to drop their nickels in the slot in the forward end of the car. The company, however, sold six tickets for a quarter, and old Ketchum used to buy them at that rate. Then he would get on a car and ride all day, sitting next to the slot. What a passenger got on he would offer to put his or her nickel in the box. He promptly pocketed the nickel and deposited a ticket purchased at reduced rates."

"His boys were not entirely chaps of the old block and used to make the money they wanted in a different way. One day they decided he ought to have a suit made. So they went to a tailor and told him to build a coat for their father, charge him $10 for it and the rest to them. The coat was a beauty and cost $10. Ketchum put it on and went down town."

"A friend met him on the street and nearly fell dead when he saw the beautiful togs on old Ketchum."

"Say," he said, "where did you get it?"

"All right, isn't it?" said Ketchum. "But you can't guess what I paid for it."

"Well," said the man, "not a cent less than $75."

"Give me $15," said Ketchum.

"Give me $15," said the man. "I'm blessed if he didn't peel it off and hand it over. You can imagine the feeling of the man."

"Oh yes, I know that story has been told about others, but it began right out in Toledo."

"But old Ketchum was all right. He met a fool friend one day who hinted to him that when he was dead his boys would throw away all his money."

"Well," said the old man with a grim chuckle, "if they have as much fun spending it as I have had getting it they'll be throwing it away."

"Well, said the old man with a grin, "if they have as much fun spending it as I have had getting it they'll be throwing it away."
